

CONTENTS

Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xii
Introduction	1
Historical Studies of the the Tai Yai : A Brief Sketch	3
The Ethnography of Tai Yai in Yunnan	8
Ethnic Identity and the Construction of an Imagined Tai Community	12
Scope and Purpose of this Study	16
Chapter One : The Setting	19
Daikong and the Chinese Revolution	20
Land Reform	22
Tai Peasants and Cooperative Farming	23
The Commune	27
Daikong and Cultural Revolution	31
Lak Chang Today	35
Chapter Two : Agricultural and Economic Patterns	43
Yearly Agricultural Cycle	43
Land Tenure	49
Cooperative Work Groups	50
Animal Raising	52
Non-Agricultural Production	53
Household Income and Expenditure	54
Chapter Three : Kinship and Marriage in Daikong	59
The Family and the Village Community	59
Family Relations	60
Choice of a Marriage Partner	66
Tha Wedding in Lak Chang	68

Sex and Marriage	75
Family and the Life Cycle	77
Chapter Four : Political and Social Organisations	85
The Chaopha	88
Council of Ministers	93
Poo Heng and Poo Kay	94
Social Classes	94
Social Groups and Organisations	96
Political Organisations and Social Changes	99
Chapter Five : Religious Beliefs and Rituals	105
Buddhism and Animism in Daily Life	107
Beliefs and Rituals in Tai Society	113
Annual Rituals and Celebrations in Daikong	114
Death and Life-Cycle Rituals	123
Life Crisis Rituals	126
Beliefs, Rituals and Social Change	129
Chapter Six : Gender Roles and Gender Relations	133
Gender Roles in Tai Culture	133
The Concept of Male Supremacy	137
Gender Roles and Social Expectation	141
Gender Roles in Changing Times	147
Chapter Seven : Continuity and Reconstruction of Tai Ethnic Identity	151
Symbolic Resistance and Reconstruction of Ethnic Identity	157
Rice : Symbolic Resistance against Cultural Supremacy	158
Poi Festivals, Buddhism and Tai Community	161
Marriage, Farmland and the Reproduction of an Imagined Community	163
Bibliography	167
Index	179