

SUMMARY

A few relatively minor changes in project operating procedure could have a positive effect on both the efficiency and efficacy of project activities. These changes, combined with improved project staff continuity, could result in a grass roots development outreach which is both cost effective and easily replicated in the other areas.