ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First and foremost, I thank my God and His trust worthiness for giving me the privilege to attend Linguistics study at Payap. My words cannot be enough to express how grateful I am to my parents: my beloved father, Dae Fu Nye who is with the Lord and my mother Ah Nah Meh, who gave me life and provided me a basic education; only from there I was able to take a further step to Payap. I am grateful to my sister who took responsibility for my mother that leaves me to focus on my studies without worries. I also want to thank my niece, Rebecca for her love and the help she gave to me with my house work for two years.

My gratefulness also goes to all of my Ajarns in the Linguistics Department who taught and shared their knowledge with love and patience. "Thank you Ajarns for a peaceful and loving environment you all provided for us and which helped us learn better". Especially, my deep gratefulness goes to professors who guided me: my main thesis advisor Dr. Larin Adams patiently explained all questions I asked and pointed out all the mistakes and weakness in writing this thesis. This gratefulness also includes his family for their friendly relationship to my family. Dr. George Bedell gave me his helpful advice.

I also express my gratitude to the SIL organization and those who sponsored me financially. I am grateful to David and Norma Morse (Northern Burma Christian Mission) for letting me have a motor bike which has helped us much for our transportation. Also thank you to Tom and Lenora Bush and Ron and Pat Morse for making your house as a second home for my daughter Christina during busy times. My thanks also go to Boneo Lisu Christian Church for your prayer and friendship.

I am grateful to Leinong Naga friends, Saya Ah Sa, Lai Lai, Ma Nyaunt Pine, and Anoi who patiently helped me collect the data which became a basic foundation for this thesis. Without their help I would not have been able to complete my thesis.

I want to express my loving thankfulness to all my classmates for their friendship, especially to Liz, Ellie, and Kristen for taking time to proofread my papers and patiently helping me with my English through out my study at Payap.

I want to express my thankful heart to my husband, James Wayesha, for allowing me to be a student again after becoming a mother and encouraging me to study Linguistics in order to make a contribution to our Naga brothers and sisters of Myanmar. My final sweet thanks go to my little Christina for her prayers and being a good girl for her mommy when I needed time alone. May God bless all of you and may He help you all to do more and more good for our society and our world.
