ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am very grateful to many individuals who have assisted me throughout this study. Without their help, this study might not have been accomplished.

My appreciation is first expressed to Assistant Professor Dr. Varunee Boon-Long, my thesis supervisor, who introduced me to the study of ESP two years ago. I also thank her for her outstanding guidance, advice, and encouragement throughout this study.

My thanks also go to Dr. Pearl Wattanakul, my thesis committee member, for her invaluable guidance and discussions throughout this study. I am indebted to A. Jana Mariah Holt, my other thesis committee member, not only for proofreading and giving suggestions on the study, but also helping me become more aware of writing English academically.

Moreover, I would also like to express my appreciation to all nursing teachers and staff at Payap University's Faculty of Nursing who helped me with the questionnaire administrations with nursing students. My thanks also go to the McCormick Hospital staff who assisted me in collecting questionnaires and provided me with a list of the Payap University nurse graduates working at McCormick Hospital.

My gratitude is also extended to Dr. Apisak Pupipat for his willingness to provide me with literature on ESP needs analysis. Furthermore, this study would not have been completed without the generosity of Mrs. Oratai Moatamedi who helped me with the statistical procedures and data interpretations. Her dedication has been highly appreciated.

Lastly, I wish to express my deepest gratitude and utmost respect to my parents who have supported me financially and morally throughout this study. They have played a major role in my success.
