ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I would like to thank my thesis advisors: Dr. Kirk Person, Ajarn Douglas Inglis, and Ajarn Mark Osborne for their advice, guidance, comments, and encouragement. Thanks for dedicating your time to read, reread, give comment and correct my drafts.

My special gratitude goes to Ajarn Douglas Inglis who proposed that I apply conceptual blending theory to my data and who helped me to understand the potential the theory holds for processing meaning.

I am grateful to all interviewees who gave me the valuable information and opinion about women nowadays and in the traditional point of view used in this thesis.

Most of all, I am very appreciative of love, understanding, and kindness from my parents who have given me life, education, everything. Thank you for your support and encouragement that has helped me to study without pressure or outside concerns. Thank you so much for everything you have given me.
