This thesis could not be completed without significant help of Dr. Gene Adams who has been my formal thesis supervisor and Dr. Jonathan Leather who not only served as my current thesis supervisor, but also put me in a challenging manner. My appreciation is also expressed to Dr. Graeme Ritchie and A. Lance Popoff, members of my committee, for their outstanding guidance, advice and encouragement throughout this study. I am grateful to Dr. Pearl Wattanakul, who encouraged me throughout my academic program.

Appreciation is extended to Lecturer Malee Kongwannit, the Head of English Department. My appreciation is also expressed to Lecturer Ouporn Chingchayanurak and Lecturer Adams Bovorne, who were the instructors of AE203, and all lecturers in the English Department.

I would like to extend my thanks to Ajarn Jenjit Muangjai, who devoted herself to proofreading and giving suggestions for this study. Moreover, I would like to thank all of the English major students who enrolled in AE203. The successful of my completion of my study depended upon their cooperation.

Lastly, I wish to express my deepest gratitude and utmost respect to my parents who have supported me financial and with encouragement. My sister and my close friends who undoubtedly gave me the inner strength to overcome some of the obstacles which I cropped up during the course of my studies. They played a major role in my success.
