ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

First of all, I would like to express my gratitude to Ajarn Kirk R. Person, my main advisor. From the very beginning, he guided and supported me spiritually as well as allocating a portion of one of his research grants to make the fieldwork for this thesis possible. Without him, the thesis could never have been completed. The way that he treats people and academic research work has been a good example for me to follow.

I would like to convey my sincere appreciation to Ajarn David Jeffery and Ajarn Ramzi Nahhas. Their great patience and tireless persistence in reading my drafts provided me with unceasing strength and fresh ideas throughout the thesis writing. Ajarn Dave's professional knowledge inspired my interest in sociolinguistics. Ajarn Ramzi has helped me throughout my data analysis, his valuable advice and aid saving me from having to do countless calculations by hand.

My special gratitude goes to Bap, who helped me so much through my study in Chiangmai. Her faithful translation of the questionnaires into Thai and patient help during the survey in Thailand paved the way for me to get the data. Indeed, I will remember her gentleness and kindness forever. My thanks also go to the language helpers Yuan Wu, Somchai, Newt and Suphaap as well as many others. Without them, I cannot imagine how I could get the first-hand data in each Bisu village. In addition, I would like to thank my friend Yang Longkun and all his colleagues working in the police station of Lisuo town, Ximeng County. They helped me find the Bisu village even though everyone else denied there were Bisu villages around that area. I also wish to thank all those who helped me in the villages and the way they welcomed me and trusted me.

I am indebted to all of the teachers and professors at the Linguistics Department of Payap University for their teaching, care and encouragement. I have benefited so much from their academic inspiration and patience to each student. It is also a touching feeling to think of so many good classmates and friends around me. Amber, who has proofread most of my term papers for the whole program, was always the one I could rely on when I met difficulties in the study. Smalley and Mang, who have accompanied me from the first semester, the most challenging semester, our mutual encouragement is still fresh in my mind. My thanks also go to Markus, Linda, Duan Lei, Kitjapol and all those who have been concerned for me, and prayed for me throughout my study in Linguistics Department. I am also greatly indebted to Daniel and Tamami; I will never forget the Friday Parties in Daniel and Tamami's house. Their unfailing love and kindness to people is always a mirror for me to correct and reflect upon myself.

I also wish to thank Professor Zhu Liyong, the head of College English Department, Yuxi Teacher's College, who allowed me to join this program although there was a shortage of teachers at that moment. I am grateful for her trust and encouragement. My gratitude also goes to Professor Xu Xianming for her help and kindness to me during my study in Payap.

Finally, I want to thank my wonderful husband, Wu Yungui, for his love and faithful support throughout my study in Thailand. It is hard to believe he had to be apart from his bride three weeks after the wedding ceremony in order to support her study abroad! I still remember how hard he helped me to collect data for my first semantics term paper and how patiently he read my e-mails written in English, every day. All my progress in my studies is due to his effort. Without him, I would be lost in many ways. At the same time, I want to thank my extended family: thanks for my mother's ardent expectations; thanks to my brother and his wife who had been encouraging me and comforting my mother while I was away; thanks for the understanding and support of my parents-in-law. Without your love and support, my time in Thailand would not have been joyful and meaningful.

At last also the first, I want to give my thankfulness to the Creator of the Universe, for bringing me here and taking care of me even before I knew HIM. Thanks for guiding me step by step to where I am today.
